

Title: Access to health data - the role of regional actors, gatekeepers, providers and individuals

The access to good quality health-related data is essential for the fast and effective transition towards personalised healthcare. The acquisition, management, storage, use and protection of the data are preconditions to this transformation.

To gain a better understanding of the regional perspective on access to health data, SAPHIRE is hosting an online workshop. The interactive session will share the voices and perspectives of regional actors from research institutions, hospitals, industry and individuals.
